

A Closing Note

If you ask me writing poetry is like slicing open your lover's throat then lending them your used tourniquet to stop the bleed knowing in the end you'll both be able to breathe easier but that it'll never come easily my dungeon shook quietly